donor impact report

education

Maria, age 14, wants to be a teacher when she grows up. This will require a high school degree, which is nearly unheard of in her village. Common Hope will support Maria as long as she stays in school. We know her dream is possible, because we have seen many children like Maria achieve excellence before.

Special thanks to Buck Holzemer & Patti Petrich for their generous donation of the photography in this report.

Children can achieve excellence, regardless of their socioeconomic background, when the right support systems are in place.

Common Hope has been educating children living in extreme poverty since 1986. We have learned what works and what doesn't work. We have learned that children can achieve excellence, regardless of socioeconomic background, when the right support systems are in place. We have learned that getting children into a school building isn't enough—that children need educational attention and family stability to succeed.

SHARING AN EDUCATIONAL MODEL THAT WORKS

Since our inception, we have refined a holistic education model that is demonstrating significant results. At New Hope School, built and operated by Common Hope, 98 percent of students met standards and advanced to the next grade, compared to the national average of only 82 percent. As we move forward, we will bring our expertise and resources to the public school system where the children who live in poverty go to school.

We live in an exciting time. Guatemala has made significant positive education reforms and we are presented with the opportunity to help local public schools with the challenging task of implementing those reforms. This includes learning how to teach the new national curriculum that encourages more creative and interactive learning—things New Hope School and our Antigua programs have been implementing for years.

In 2009, we began support activities in San Rafael's public school and the results have been promising: attendance increased by a record 57 percent, and six students graduated from elementary school, a feat few in their community have accomplished. When we provided construction materials, community members rallied to build a new classroom, security wall, and kitchen, donating their time and skills. Our health care partner, El FARO, teamed with Common Hope on a school nutrition program, so students are guaranteed at least one square meal a day. All of these improvements occurred in one short year. We anticipate continued improvements in the years to come.

Student Promotion Rates (K-12) in Guatemala

health care

If a child is distracted by hunger pains, he will struggle to succeed in school. Our nutrition initiative saw a 9 percent reduction in malnutrition, despite an increase in referrals.

A child's ability to show up and do well at school depends greatly on his or her health.

Treatable and communicable diseases are still prevalent and continue to be major causes of death in Guatemala. Common Hope provides health care and preventive health education so medical issues are addressed before they become emergencies.

Our Antigua clinic achieved a number of health care advances in 2009. Our nutrition initiative saw a 9 percent reduction in chronic malnutrition, despite a 6 percent increase in children referred to the clinic. The number of patients who got their blood pressure under control was 15 percent higher than 2008. And, the clinic pioneered a new preventive health initiative, training 23 community leaders as health promoters who will raise awareness about the importance of preventive health and connect individuals to health resources in their area. . . . .

people were screened at community health fairs in 2009.

A child's home can cause many sick days.

The dirt floors in many Guatemalan homes lead to parasitic diseases, which cause diarrhea, the leading cause of death for infants. Open cooking fires cause respiratory diseases—the leading cause of death for all ages. Common Hope provides the opportunity for families to work sweat-equity hours to earn homes that are clean, dry, and safe. This includes a concrete floor that reduces parasites by more than 75 percent, and a vented stove that uses 1/3 the firewood and routes harmful smoke out of the home.

In 2009, 29 homes were built for families, who worked a total of 5,245 collective hours to earn materials for these homes. This included the first two homes built in San Rafael. Families also continued to work for latrines, utilities, and houses.

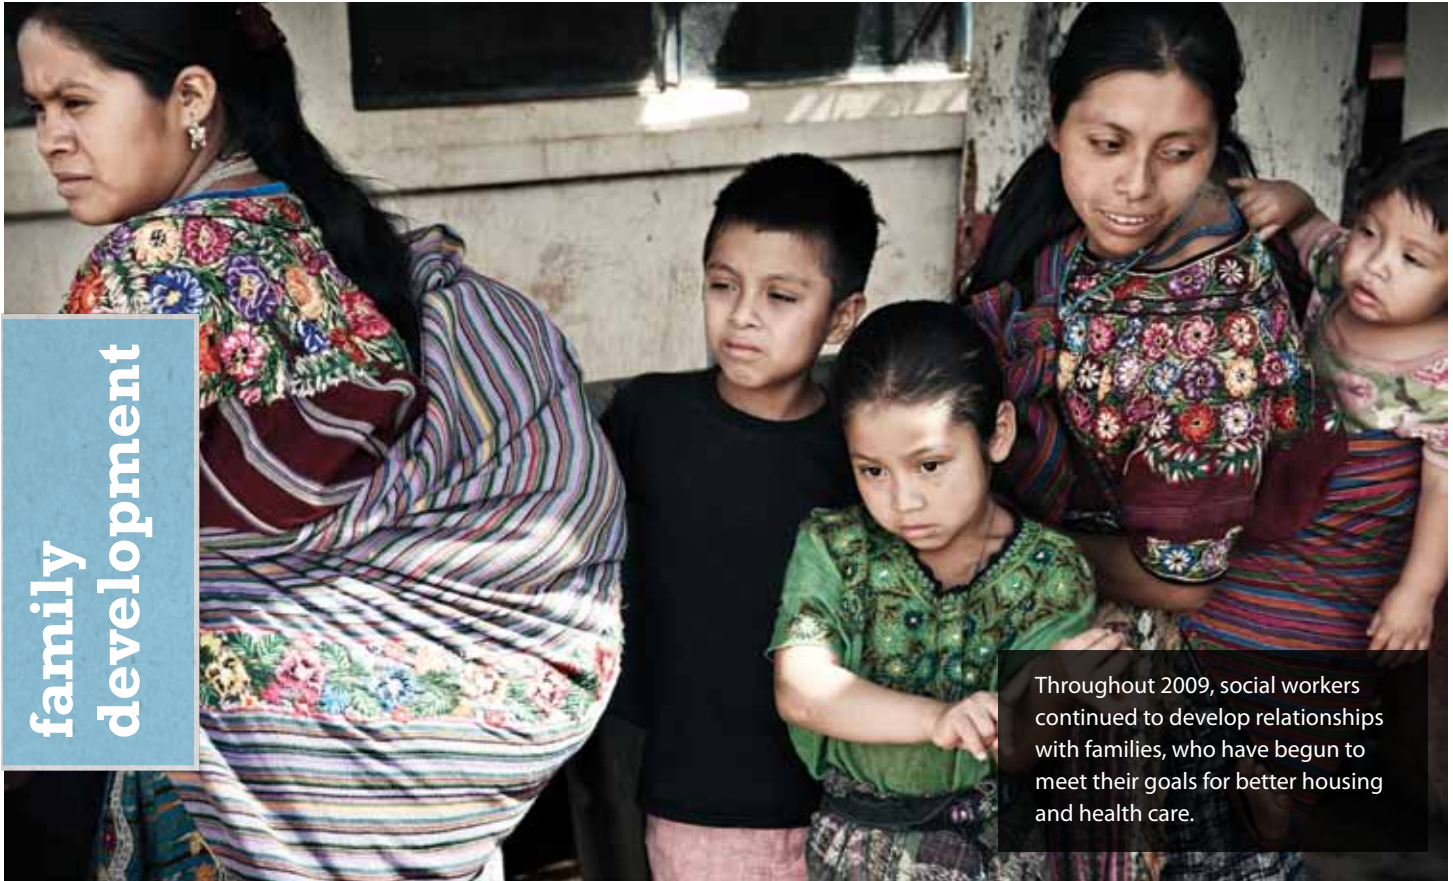

housing

affiliated families received new homes or housing improvements in 2009.

family
development

Throughout 2009, social workers continued to develop relationships with families, who have begun to meet their goals for better housing and health care.

A strong family provides a solid home base for students.

Many families struggle with the effects of the 36-year civil war and entrenched poverty, including alcoholism, abuse, unemployment, and poor self-esteem. These things hinder families from moving out of poverty and improving their lives.

Each family affiliated with Common Hope works with a social worker to create goals and plans to achieve them. The social worker facilitates a family's access to all of Common Hope's integrated programs. Last year, social workers conducted more than 3,500 visits to the 1,300 families sponsored by Common Hope. In addition, 55 families graduated from a series of parenting classes, and another 60 individuals were placed in new jobs with the help of our job placement services.

293 legal cases were resolved in 2009, including land titles, identity papers, and employment documents.

Common Hope 2009 results

2,567

students attended school in 2009 with the help of Common Hope, and 125 of those children graduated from high school. Another 198 graduated from sixth grade, while the average Guatemalan has only 5.4 years of school.

125

high school students graduated with the skills for professional careers, in a country where the average adult has not completed elementary school.

86%

of Common Hope students K-12 advanced to the next grade, compared to the national average of only 76%, despite working with the most impoverished children that are least likely to succeed.

3,504

social work visits occurred with the families who partner with us. Families utilized the time to check in about their challenges, goals, and progress made.

11,299

medical and dental visits were fielded by our Antigua clinics, providing both preventive and curative care, filling 24,500 prescriptions, and performing 4,400 lab screenings.

29

homes were earned by families and built by them alongside Common Hope staff and volunteers. In addition, 9 stoves were built, routing harmful wood smoke out of the homes.

5,245

sweat-equity hours were worked by families to earn homes that are clean, dry, and safe.

12,617

volunteer hours were worked by more than 300 volunteers in Guatemala and the U.S.

Defying all philanthropic trends.

Dear Supporters,

Common Hope weathered the financial tumult of 2009 with the support of our extraordinarily loyal donors and is in a stronger financial position than ever. We began 2010 with financial reserves in excess of $1.6 million, an all-time high. While it is true that our total revenue for 2009 declined more than $250,000 when compared with the prior year, our revenue from sponsorship increased. That fact defies all the philanthropic trends of 2009 and speaks volumes about the compassion and commitment of our supporters.

Like many of you and many of our families in Guatemala, Common Hope had to get creative to live within its means. We made the difficult decision to hold off on commitments to new families in 2009 and focused on delivering the most critical services to our existing families in the most efficient way possible. We let go of our adult education program when we found community resources with similar programming who could hire our staff. We launched small pilot programs to test new ways of delivering on our educational commitment so we can reach more children with a better education in 2011. In short, we believe we used the crises to tighten our focus on our most important program elements and open ourselves to innovative ideas. And, most importantly, we balanced our budget delivering a small, $52,000 operating surplus at the end of the year.

We approach 2010 fearlessly, confident in the direction and accomplishments of our programs and with gratitude toward those who make it possible.

With thanks,

Kathleen L. Lock

Director of Finance & Administration

Relationships matter.

Dear Friends,

Because of your generosity, Common Hope emerged from the most challenging economic climate in recent history a stronger, more focused organization. We continued to serve 2,600 children and their families in Guatemala, honoring the partnership commitment we have with each of them.

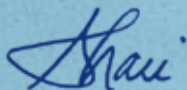

At Common Hope our partnerships are based on relationships—between our donors, students, their families, and their schools. These relationships are fundamental to students graduating from high school, developing critical thinking skills, and becoming agents of change.

Our belief is that by achieving these outcomes we affect not only the lives of the students and their families, but we sow the seeds of a better Guatemala, as those graduates become stably-employed adults, loving parents, and leaders in their communities perpetuating Common Hope's ongoing work.

Nearly 25 years of experience has shaped this model, adjusting to meet the ongoing challenges and building on our successes. We will continue to empower families in support of their children's education, and we will increase our involvement in their schools to help them receive the quality of education that will create hope and opportunity for a better future.

We recognize our ability to do so relies on you. We spend your gifts carefully, honoring your investment in Guatemala's future. Thank you for making it all possible.

Gratefully,

Shari Blindt
Executive Director
